NOVEMBER 2020

Supporting Parents with Behaviors Via Distant Learning Wednesday, November 18, 1:00 - 2:00 PM Parent and family involvement has always been essential to student learning and success. But, as more students must learn from home as a result of school closures, family involvement has taken on an entirely new meaning. Suddenly, many families are being asked to assume a lot more responsibility in their students' schooling, and teachers are seeking ways to best guide and support them. This presentation focuses on students who receive online learning and strategies for parents to provide support in the home. Presenter(s) will provide resources and materials that will potentially alleviate the struggles parents are experiencing during this difficult time.
